

DESIGN IN COLOUR

Two townhouses on a tight site in Te Whanganui-a-Tara Wellington adopt natural tones.

Townhouses designed for sale aren't often known for interesting materials or colourful paint palettes – but then most townhouses aren't designed by Ben Mitchell-Anyon and Sally Ogle.

Restrained and crisp, yet warm, concrete and steel are offset by a palette drawn from the surrounding trees – Resene Half Rivergum across cabinetry throughout one unit; Resene Cabbage Pont in the other. On the ceiling: the architect's stand-by, the ever-elegant Resene Black White.
